January 15, 2008 (Spring Valley, NY) - American Innovations, Inc. (AI) has revamped its corporate website www.AmericanInnovations.com to streamline new offerings and keep visitors up to date.

This website offers a variety of resources that allows visitors, prospects, customers and vendors to be updated with corporate announcements, contract vehicles, industry news, government and private sector links, security resources, helpful articles and much more. Diana Enciso, President of AI comments "We are pleased to offer our customers, associates, and partners with a site that allows them to understand who we are, how we can help them, and what is the most efficient way to work with us." American Innovations, Inc. recognizes that its success is driven by their ability to help others satisfy their requirements.

The site has been enhanced with industry resources, such as government programs and implementation guides. RSS feeds and bookmarks have also been added in order to provide users the opportunity to share the website's content with social networks they may be affiliated.

AI's corporate website highlights articles written by AI personnel and subject matter experts for several leading industry publications such as: "The Detonator"; "Counterterrorism"; "Public Works"; "Government Security News"; and "FBI National Academy Associate". Quick links to important Government agencies and by-the-second industry updates are geared to give visitors the most detailed yet concise means for obtaining information related to the industry all in one place.
